I took refuge in Konigsberg. So thoroughly did poleon organize the pursuit, and so carefully did estimate the total result of his victory, that nothing aped him. The French soldiers carried everything ore them. A Prussian reserve corps was easily ,ten at Halle by Bernadotte, and fled for refuge the unprovisioned fortress of Magdeburg. Lannes ;ed Dessau; Davout, Wittenberg; while Murat, lit, and Ney proceeded to invest Magdeburg, which those days was the strategic key of the Elbe valley, resisted until November, but eventually fell, as did) Erfurt. In fact, the French ransacked the land, en Hohenlohe did not escape them. Being over-.en by the infantry of Lannes and the cavalry of irat, he was first driven from Prenzlau, and then, on tober twenty-eighth, he surrendered, being a victim tly to the duplicity of Murat, who declared that a idred thousand French were closing in on him, and tly to the stupidity of his own messenger, who erted that the tale was true. Frederick William iself would have been captured at Weissensee but Bliicher, who brazenly declared to Klein, the French nmander, that an armistice had been granted —a :e falsehood. Stettin capitulated to Lasalle's cavalry the thirtieth, and Kiistrin soon opened its doors. e fortresses of Spandau and Hameln followed their mple, all four being surrendered with suspicious ility; in two instances the French and Prussian liers actually joined to hiss and execrate the govern-isa, Alexander I, Bliicher, nowitch, Golovine, Schiemann, isenau, Scharnhorst, Czarto- Schilder, Lelewel, and Oginski;

:i, Nesselrode, Speranski, and Duncker: Preussen wahrend der
; the general histories of Franzosischen Okkupation; Mtlf-ken, Hassel, Hausser, Perthes, fling: Aus meinem Leben. Lettowtschke,Beer,Fournier,Krones, Vorbeck: Der Krieg von 1806-07; •theimer, Bernhardi, Bogda- Foucart: Campagne de Prusse,